Each semester, P.A.S. students are required to have a mid-semester evaluation to assess their progress.

*Students who complete the fall semester with a cumulative grade point average of 3.0 (B) may elect to take 15 credits in the spring semester.

Exiting the Program

Students who complete all program requirements, including the P.A.S. curriculum, with a 3.0 cumulative grade point average automatically exit the program at the end of their first year.

Students who complete their first year with a cumulative grade point average between 3.0 and 2.0 or who do not fulfill the first year requirements will remain in the Program for Academic Success during their second year. These students will choose their own classes from among the university course offerings; however, each semester, they must include two Core courses. Program for Academic Success

The LIU Post Program for Academic Success, part of the Learning Support Center, was created to assist promising students who do not meet LIU Post admission requirements in achieving academic success. The goal of this one-year academic program is to help students become matriculated without restriction by providing a reduced course load, smaller class size, support services, and continuous evaluation during the freshman year.

Admission

To be considered for admission into the Program for Academic Success (P.A.S.), students must complete and submit to the Admissions Office: a regular admission application, an official high school transcript and aptitude test scores (either ACT or SAT), a personal statement, and two letters of academic recommendation. The Admissions committee will refer appropriate candidates to P.A.S.

Candidates will not be considered unless they possess one of the following:

- a minimum 80 average
- a minimum score of 480 critical reading or 440 math on the SAT
- equivalent ACT scores

All P.A.S. candidates are required to attend an Information/Interview Session before acceptance can be considered. Admission is based on the student's potential and motivation to succeed in a college environment.

P.A.S. students must be full-time students. Students in the program are admitted to the University on a restricted basis (12-13 credits per semester) and will remain restricted until they exit the program.
